Strippers drugged, scammed men: DEA

Crime. Authorities said the women ran up as much as $50,000 on the men's cards after drugging them.

A group of New York City strippers drugged rich men and scammed them out of tens of thousands of dollars, authorities said on Wednesday.

Four men, including a doctor and a lawyer, were targeted between September and December of last year, authorities said. The strippers allegedly spiked their drinks and drove them to strip clubs where they were too wasted to stop more than $200,000 in credit card charges, officials said.

Authorities with the Drug Enforcement Agency and NYPD arrested four women this week on charges including grand larceny and assault. A strip club manager also faces charges. Samantha Barbash, 40, was identified as the suspected ringleader of the crew. Her lawyer, Stephen Murphy, said his client denies the charges.

"She's never stolen anything," Murphy said. "She's not guilty."

Fuzzy memory

The men woke up in their beds with few memories of the encounters, authorities said.

- Those who disputed the charges were blackmailed by the strippers, who threatened to go public with what happened, officials said.

- Neither Scores nor the Roadhouse face charges in the case.

Officials said an undercover investigation revealed the women met the men in New York area bars on the pretense of dates or trawled through bars for targets. The strippers impaired them with Molly, a form of Ecstasy, tranquilizers or cocaine, according to federal authorities, sometimes drugging the men without their consent.

The men were then driven to Scores on Manhattan's West Side and Roadhouse NYC Gentlemen's Club in Queens, officials said. The women took their credit cards and discussed how much to charge, police said.

Officials said the men were charged from $5,000 to over $50,000, sometimes on multiple cards, for services including private rooms and drinks. One

Stripper: Case isn't the norm

The allegations in the bust are so uncommon the case "sounded like a movie," said Maria, a 28-year-old stripper, using an alias for privacy. Metro spoke with Maria about working at a local strip club.

How long have you been a stripper?

I've been in the sex industry for the last seven years on and off. I got started in college to pay for student loans when there weren't a lot of high-paying jobs in New York.

Have you ever heard of a scam like this?

No, never. I think there's this inherent distrust, where people believe there are strippers who want all of your money, but that's not true.

But you want clients to spend money?

Yes — encouraging guys to get dances, go to the private room, things like that increase your earnings. But we don't encourage people to get drunk, 'cause no one wants a drunk client.

Is it common for men to spend this much?

At a high-end club in New York City, spending tens and tens of thousands is not common, but like $10,000? I wouldn't be shocked.

New Yorkers aren't wild about banning horse carriages — but they're less convinced about ferrets, a new poll found.

Most New York City voters don't think horse-drawn carriages should be banned, but they're divided about allowing pet ferrets, according to a Quinnipiac University poll released Wednesday.

The new administration is considering loosening a 15-year-old ban on ferrets. Mayor Bill de Blasio's office is also looking into a range of options to remove carriage horses off city streets.

Online voting would make it easier for absentee and military voters. / GETTY IMAGES

System is proposed for online voting in elections

Democracy. The council bill would accommodate absentee and military ballots.

A politician wants to put city elections on the Web to increase voter turnout.

Legislation introduced by Bronx Councilman Fernando Cabrera on Wednesday would require an online voting system where absentee and military ballots could be cast in certain municipal elections.

A spokeswoman for Cabrera said the system, which would not initially be available for all voters, represents a "baby step."

"Many facets of life are completed online and voting should not be excluded," provided the necessary security measures," Cabrera said in a statement.

The idea of online voting worries Neal Rosenstein, government reform coordinator of the New York Public Interest Research Group.

"There's a ton of folks who say that the system wouldn't be secure," he said. "Public confidence in the election process is the most important thing."

To help military and absentee voters, Rosenstein instead suggested instant runoff voting or moving local and state primaries to June.

A spokeswoman said the city's Board of Elections does not comment on pending legislation.

Legislation

The proposed system would apply to primary, runoff and general elections.

- Absentee and military ballots could be cast online for mayor, public advocate, city comptroller, borough presidents and council members.

- Once the measure is enacted, the law would have to be ratified by city voters during a general election referendum.

Cantor to leave in GOP stunner

Virginia. Cantor was defeated in a primary race by a political rookie backed by the Tea Party.

Cantor is expected to tell his fellow Republicans that he will resign from his leadership job at the end of July, just before the long summer break, aides said. That sparked an intra-party scramble for House leadership positions. But it was still unclear Wednesday when party elections would be held.

Meanwhile, Capitol Hill was buzzing over whether the Tea Party victory could bring Washington back to the showdowns of 2011, 2012 and 2013 over budget deficits and the size of government.

Financial analysts feared that the relative political calm that had prevailed since December's budget deal could be disrupted. REUTERS

The toppling of Eric Cantor, the No. 2 Republican in the U.S. House of Representatives, left his political party in chaos on Wednesday, as financial markets worried the shakeup might renew messy budget fights that in the past have caused government shutdowns and near credit defaults.

Cantor, who has served as House majority leader since 2011, unexpectedly lost Tuesday's primary election to college economics professor David Brat, a Tea Party activist.

That brought an abrupt halt to the career of a rising star who had his eye on the top House job of Speaker.

CANTOR HAD BEEN SEEN BY MANY AS AN EVENTUAL SUCCESSOR TO HOUSE SPEAKER JOHN BOEHNER.

Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel on Wednesday defended the U.S. decision to trade five Taliban leaders at Guantanamo for war prisoner Bowe Bergdahl, insisting it was the right move but admitting failure to tell lawmakers hurt trust with Congress.

Hagel told the House of Representatives Armed Services Committee that the administration felt a growing sense of urgency about freeing Bergdahl in recent weeks due to concerns that his health was deteriorating and warnings from Qatari intermediaries that "time was not on our side."

Quoted

"His conduct will be judged on facts, not hearsay, posturing, charges or innuendo." Hagel

"We grew increasingly concerned that any delay, or any leaks, could derail the deal and further endanger Sergeant Bergdahl," Hagel said at the sometimes contentious hearing. "We were told by Qataris that a leak would end the negotiations for Bergdahl's release."

Lawmakers have sharply criticized the Obama administration for freeing the five Taliban leaders held at Guantanamo prison without giving them 30 days notice as required by law. REUTERS

App. Breathalyzer selfies paint a picture of US alcohol intake

The first data from breathalyzer selfies — measurements of blood-alcohol content by a new smartphone app — show that users drank the most on the weekend of the summer solstice, the longest day of the year.

San Francisco-based breathalyzer manufacturer BACtrack reported on Wednesday that the highest average blood-alcohol content (BAC) from April 2013 to April 2014 was registered on Saturday, June 22, at 0.115 percent. The legal definition for drunk driving is 0.08 percent.

The data shed light on drinking patterns, which can guide highway patrols and others determining when to focus on drunk-driving enforcement.

But the primary purpose of the $149.99 BACtrack Mobile, which consists of a breathalyzer that sends readings via Bluetooth to a smartphone and was introduced in 2013, is to raise people's awareness of how drinking affects their BAC and therefore causes impairment, said BACtrack founder and Chief Executive Officer Keith Nothacker.

The mobile app is intended to let users check their blood-alcohol content before getting behind the wheel, but 15 percent of the 100,000-plus tests were on friends and others. That seemed wise: Tests on friends found an average BAC of 0.085, while selfies averaged 0.066.

The geography of drinking also offered some surprises. Users in Montana and South Dakota had the highest average BAC, at 0.101 percent, while the lowest were in New Hampshire (0.012), Delaware (0.027) and Utah (0.031), where the dominant Mormon Church forbids alcohol consumption. REUTERS

High days

BACtrack data's most booze-fueled holidays are:

- New Year's Eve (an average of 0.095).
- Super Bowl Sunday (an average of 0.087).
- Valentine's Day (an average of 0.081).

NOT SURPRISINGLY, THE HIGHEST AVERAGE BACS WERE RECORDED AFTER SATURDAY-NIGHT DRINKING, WHEN THEY PEAKED (0.113) AT 4 A.M. ON SUNDAY. /METRO PHOTO ILLUSTRATION

Truck driver in Tracy Morgan crash pleads not guilty

A Georgia truck driver pleaded not guilty on Wednesday to charges of vehicular manslaughter and assault by auto in connection with a pileup on a New Jersey highway that critically injured comedian Tracy

Morgan and killed another comic.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc. delivery driver Kevin Roper, 35, who was arraigned in New Brunswick, New Jersey, had not slept in more than 24 hours when he triggered the fatal crash, according to prosecutors.

Roper said little during the brief court hearing, but answered, "Yes," when the judge asked if he understood the charges. His attorney, David Glassman, entered the pleas of not guilty.

Roper is accused of failing to see traffic slowing in front of him on the New Jersey Turnpike and slamming into the back of a limousine van carrying Morgan and several of his associates.

The chain-reaction crash early on Saturday involved six vehicles and left a passenger in the limo van, comedian James "Jimmy Mack" McNair, dead. REUTERS

Court order. Girl in 'Slenderman' stabbing to have competency test

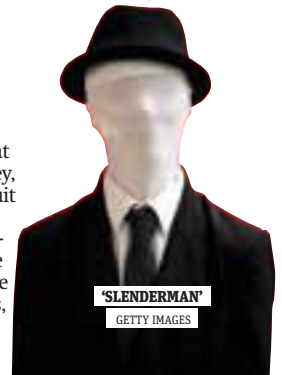

One of two 12-year-old Wisconsin girls accused of luring a friend into the woods and stabbing her repeatedly to please a fictional Internet character will undergo a mental competency exam, a circuit court commissioner ordered on Wednesday.

Attorneys representing Anissa Weier and Morgan Geyser, who are charged as adults with first-degree attempted homicide, said after a brief hearing they want the case transferred to juvenile court.

Geyser will undergo a mental competency test at the request of her attorney, a Waukesha County Circuit Court commissioner said.

Attorney Anthony Cotton, said the results of the evaluation, which must be completed within 15 days, will be sealed. REUTERS

Mom, boyfriend face charges after first-grader heroin scare

The mother of a child who brought bags of heroin to her first-grade classroom in Philadelphia was charged Wednesday along with her boyfriend with reckless endangerment and drug offenses.

The entire class of first-graders was taken to a hospital for examination on Tuesday after a teacher saw a 6-year-old girl playing with what appeared to be narcotics, a police spokeswoman said.

The girl's teacher turned over 10 bags of heroin to police, and officers discovered an additional bag in the girl's pants pocket, police said, adding that the girl may have torn open a packet with her teeth. REUTERS

Rebels take Saddam's hometown of Tikrit

Tikrit. The militants occupied the provincial government headquarters.

Sunni rebels from an al Qaeda splinter group overran the Iraqi city of Tikrit on Wednesday and closed in on the biggest oil refinery in the country, making further gains in their rapid military advance against the Shiite-led government in Baghdad.

The threat to the Baiji refinery comes after militants from the Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) seized the northern city of Mosul, advancing their aim of creating a Sunni Caliphate straddling the border between Iraq and Syria.

The fall of Mosul, Iraq's second biggest city, is a blow to Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki's attempts to defeat the militants, who have seized territory in Iraq over the past year following the withdrawal of U.S. forces.

Having also taken two small towns north of Baghdad, Dhiluiya and Yathrib, the insurgents are in control of between 10 and 15 percent of Iraqi territory, excluding Kurdistan, and have led many Iraqis to fear they have the capital, Baghdad, in their sights.

Security sources said ISIL militants on Wednesday drove more than 60 vehicles into Tikrit, the home town of former Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein, which lies about 100 miles north of Baghdad.

"Our forces were caught by surprise, they never expected ISIL would use police and army Humvee vehicles, we mistook them for government forces and it was too late to stop them," said a police captain who fled from Tikrit to Samarra.

OMG! The auction is on for world's largest video game collection

The certified holder of a Guinness World Record for the largest collection of video games is ready to put them on the market. Michael Thomasson's haul of more than 11,000 games with no repeats is up for grabs on GameGavel.com, for the current figure of $700,500. With the auction set to close on Sunday, the 43-year-old from Buffalo, New York, tells Metro his reasons behind selling and why he's started collecting video games again.

What are you expecting to get for your collection?

I don't know what to expect but I'm told the value is about $700,000. My collection is pristine: I've been running games stores for twenty-something years, so I would have the choice of the copies and I have over 2,600 games that are factory-sealed.

Are you going to splash the cash on a new house?

No, I'm a pretty simple man. I have some family that has some needs that I'm going to help out with. I'm going to get my daughter into a better school, and I would like my wife to be able to have nice things from time to time. First of all, I'll pay the bills and pay off the mortgage and do the responsible things, but hopefully there's enough left over so I can enjoy some of it, too.

You already started a new collection?

I've started buying back my favorites [duplicates of what's in the Guinness collection]. When I come across them in good shape and for a fair price, I buy them.

So how many rooms does your collection take up?

One primary game room, a secondary room and there are pieces and parts of games all over the house.

Something stinks in Southern Cali

Mayor tosses dog feces onto neighbor's lawn

The mayor of the wealthy Southern California city of San Marino was under fire after police said he was caught on camera apparently leaving a bag of dog feces in his neighbor's walkway. Surveillance tape monitoring the residence captured Mayor Dennis Kneier leaving what was said to be a bag of dog feces on a private walkway leading to his neighbor's home, San Marino Police said. The owner of the home, who claimed to identify Kneier and his wife in the footage, called the police but does not intend to press any littering charges, police said.

The Whittier Daily News reported the mayor sent a letter to his neighbor apologizing for the incident.

"Late in the day this past Saturday, June 7, Liz and I were returning from a walk in Lacy Park when we noticed a bag of dog waste in your west parkway near the lamp post," the letter states. "Rather than leave it or dispose of it properly, I placed it on your side walkway. This was a mistake, for which I apologize. It won't happen again." REUTERS

1 Miley Cyrus wrecks Selena Gomez onstage

Miley Cyrus wasn't too smiley during the weekend. During a concert in Italy on Sunday night, she showed the world that she isn't a big fan of Selena Gomez. Performing her song 'FU' (yup, the two letters are short for you-know-what) she was reportedly holding up a cardboard cutout of Selena Gomez, and at some point she threw it out to the audience. It should be said that the singer snatched it from someone in the audience in the first place, but considering which song she was singing at the time, it sounds like there was a hidden message there (or not even that hidden, right?). We don't know where this outburst of hatred comes from, but the two singers have both dated Nick Jonas from The Jonas Brothers, but that was a loooong time ago (just like the photo we've included of the two together in 2008). Having a hard time letting go, Miley? Or is this just another way of distancing yourself from Disney? We already got that when you started sticking your tongue out. All. The. Time! LASSE E. KRISTIANSEN

2 Affleck gambling with his relationship?

Ben Affleck's casino habit may be driving an even bigger wedge between him and wife, Jennifer Garner, who reportedly scuttled plans to spend the summer in Michigan with Affleck while he films "Batman vs. Superman: Dawn of Justice," according to Star magazine. "Jen canceled her trip. She just doesn't want to be Ben's enabler or babysitter," a source says. "She's completely distraught over Ben's problems. It's a never-ending roller coaster." And that roller coaster has evidently been continuing at casinos in Detroit and across the border in Ontario, Canada, where Affleck has been spotted looking disheveled and distraught, betting $5,000 a time at the tables. "Ben has a compulsive personality," another source adds. "Once he starts gambling, he can't stop; he stays up all night, betting thousands. Then [he] sleeps all day, which infuriates Jen."

Taylor is considering a Swift career change

With her success as a musician taken care of, Taylor Swift is reportedly shifting her focus to film, according to Radar Online. "Taylor badly wants to be a movie star. She's determined to prove herself as an actress and not simply a singer who dabbles in movies," a source says. "She's finished her new album and is now busy reading every script she can get her hands on. The clock is ticking, and Taylor's reps are intent on having her locked into a potential breakout role before the end of summer." While she made a cameo in 2010's "Valentine's Day" and will appear this summer in "The Giver," she's on the hunt for a lead role. "Taylor is now under pressure to make her first major movie deal," the source explains. "She has been offered the moon — technically, about $10 million — to make a concert film in the vein of Justin Bieber's and Katy Perry's efforts, but Taylor's policy of aiming high has put the kibosh on those plans. She doesn't just want to be known as a singer, so she's trying to get aligned with some high-profile, nonmusical productions."

On the issues

The A-word

Are you getting tired of people referring to this as "the abortion movie"?

Yeah, because it isn't a comedy about abortion. It's a romantic comedy with a modern story in which a woman has a safe and regret-free procedure.

That's surprisingly rare, considering how abortion is usually dealt with in film and on TV.

It's important, I think, to examine and express the idea that even though a choice is made and a choice is clear, that it's really complex even after the choice is made. Those more nuanced situations are where you can find a lot of emotion, and they're what makes a story relatable and interesting. To have faith in a story where a woman has an abortion and it's not a trauma or a victory but rather just an aspect of her life and something that adds to her personal development — to trust that your audiences might be satisfied with that if you examine it thoughtfully is a really good feeling. It doesn't even feel like that much of a risk to take, but it does feel like a necessity right now. If we're thinking of this story, we should tell it.

But you're right, it's not what this movie is "about."

Yeah. But I get it. And honestly I would much rather people talk about it than not talk about it, and if people are going to say, "It's the THIS," the only thing that will happen is that people will show up to the movie and realize that it's many things and not just one.

JENNY SLATE

The "Obvious Child" star talks wasted youth and why her latest film isn't an "abortion comedy."

THE ROARING TWENTIES

Jenny Slate — "Saturday Night Live" alum and the woman behind "Marcel the Shell" — takes the lead in "Obvious Child," an indie comedy in which she plays a late-20s New York City native who is dealing with what could be her worst Valentine's Day yet. The events of the day include an appointment to get an abortion, an aspect of the film that's been stealing most of the focus. It's something Slate is not thrilled about, but also totally cool with.

"Obvious Child" manages to capture an authentic look at a stage of life that we don't see closely examined very often in film for some reason.

I know, it's strange. People seem to think of the late 20s as, like, those are the go-getters

There have been happier days for Jenny Slate in "Obvious Child."

CHRIS TEAGUE

and people who are too young to say, like, "Get your life together." But, in fact, I think the late 20s are really, really tough. They were really tough for me. I would never go back to that.

Really?

Sort of. Nobody told me that my 20s would be a surprise second adolescence, you know?

And also, you're getting to the point where you're like, "I should have a career formed now, right?" And it just takes longer than that. There's also an incorrect assertion that personal development should be finished by that point, and that's untrue. That's 100 percent wrong.

It almost feels weird to think how much people would previously be expected to have figured out by 25.

Yeah, like what the f—? In eight years, starting at 22 to 30, I'm going to have to get all that s— together — and half of it I don't even want. No! I'm sure if you're in a field that has more structure, maybe you are more settled by that point. But freak-outs are allowed and normal.

1 '22 Jump Street'
Worried that this follow-up to the 2012 desecration of the '80s Johnny Depp show will be a weak sequel? So is the film! This time undercover cops Jonah Hill and Channing Tatum go to college. But instead of endless jabs at beer pong, most of the jokes mock the very idea of sequels, especially ones that repeat the first one or blow up the budget to ludicrous sizes.

2 'How to Train Your Dragon 2'
Where "22 Jump Street" mocks repeating a surprise hit, this sequel to the lighthearted animated picture about Viking kids with American accents riding on cute dragons does something completely different. It goes weirdly dark, with our heroes (led by Jay Baruchel) fighting a gang of evil dragon kidnappers. Cate Blanchett also does some very serious voice work.

4 'We Are the Best!'
Lukas Moodysson made one of the great, completely noncondescending teen films — 2000's "Show Me Love" — and his latest does the same for tomboyish tweens. Three girls start a punk band, and if their band isn't the best, then the film kind of is.

5 'Obvious Child'
The hoped-for breakout film for Jenny Slate ("Saturday Night Live"), this indie comedy stars the actress as a woman who is dumped, fired and knocked up. The Valentine's Day abortion she schedules is handled with surprising and refreshing casualness.

Real life. The Human Rights Watch Film Festival prowls the globe for the big (and not yet big) issues.

There's a world of difference between last year's "Mandela: Long Walk to Freedom" and "Nelson Mandela: The Myth and Me." The former is a stodgy, endless-seeming biopic that does little but valorize an already established titan. The latter is an essayistic documentary that uses the South African leader as a jumping-off point to explore actual issues. It addresses the concept of Mandela as a figure and asks all the tough questions, including what exactly did famous, Western celebrities seek when they took selfies with him?

Khalo Matabane's restlessly curious doc is one of many like it in the annual Human Rights Watch Film Festival, which since 2003 has toured the globe with films that try to challenge viewers rather than merely appeal to armchair liberalism. In "Return to Homs," we witness Talal Derki's first-person account of the Syrian Civil War, which started in 2011. But unlike "The Square," about the Egyptian Revolution, there are few spots for celebration. The rebellion is quickly pounded into tiny ko, it's a land that stifles free speech, but hasn't completely squashed the Belarus Free Theatre, whose productions sometimes simply contain actors relating true, harrowing stories. The film's Belarusian footage had to be smuggled out of the country, while the troupe find themselves performing abroad, using bold, shocking theatrics to win awards and celebrity advocates.

The series' scope runs almost as wide as the globe itself, with films on refugees in Cyprus ("Evaporating Borders"), abortion in Nicaragua ("A Quiet Inquisition"), Hamas ("The Green Prince") and a transgender former Navy SEAL ("Lady Valor: The Kristin Beck Story"). There's even George Takei ("To Be Takei"), for a relative lighter note in the festival that still brings the seriousness of the "Star Trek" actor's LGBT activism into focus.

Relationships. Here are some tips to avoid becoming overwhelmed by online dating

It's a familiar story to anyone who has ventured into the world of online dating: You want to meet someone new, so you finally sign up for your site of choice and throw yourself into the fray. After a few busy weeks of messaging and coffee dates, you come to the stark realization that you're exhausted.

Since 2007, online dating coach Virginia Roberts, aka "The Heartographer," has been working with singles to guide them through the world of dating online. Here, she shares her tips on how to avoid burnout.

Know which sites work for you

Remember that each dating site has its own culture and vibe, and one may be a better fit for you than others. "Only return to the sites that give you results," advises Roberts. "Go with what's working

Remember, online dating is supposed to be fun. / FUSE

for you."

Don't overthink the process

You don't always have to send out detailed, crafted messages at first. Instead, you can just hint at your interest. "With Tinder, you should swipe right a lot [to indicate you like the person] and not over-think it," Roberts says. "You can apply that same philosophy to OkCupid by rating people five stars. You should do that for people who meet your minimum criteria."

You don't HAVE to reply to everyone

Tip

Manage your messages

Don't let dating mobile alerts and a constant stream of emails stress you out.

Roberts also suggests that users utilize email filters and other tools to send your dating messages to a designated folder. You can then look at your messages when you have time.

"You can always go back to that person later," Roberts says. "You don't want to feel overwhelmed."

You have options

Joining groups and meet-ups are other ways to get out there. "Online dating should just be one tool in your toolbox," Roberts says. LAKSHMI GANDHI

Dad's Day gift

Scotch & Shave

Dads need pampering, too. Book a Scotch & Shave ($50) at Freeman's Sporting Club and Barbershop, where he can sip a glass of Dewar's 12 on the rocks while enjoying an old-fashioned razor shave. Open air flair

Haven Rooftop at The Sanctuary Hotel

the same flair as dining alfresco high enough to take in a city view. At Haven Rooftop, order the steak au poivre and your choice of any beer for $25. Weather permitting, this is a perfect deal. 132 W. 47th St., 212-466-9000

Treat your cool dad at a hot spot

Father's Day. Show your love with the best food and drink deals.

We've rounded up a list of restaurants (and a bar) to impress your daddy-o.

Father's Day wish list, right? Have a bonding experience over a steak-for-two dinner special ($80): 32 ounces of prime porterhouse with dad's choice of sides, paired with a glass of wine. 100 W. 67th St., 212-496-4000

Max Brenner

Generally, going bald is probably not something men prefer, but on Father's Day it can actually work in their favor. Balding dads will receive a free chocolate granita with their meal. Mention the deal when you arrive. Free stuff is good stuff, right? 841 Broadway, 646-467-8803

Party at home

Guitar-drums duo Carley and Jonathan Wolf call their lo-fi sound "stomp-and-roll." It's an appropriate moniker for a sonic palette that draws from equal parts juke-joint blues, garage rock and Americana. Carley coos and caterwauls over her fuzzed-out guitar, while Jonathan pounds the backbeat and adds backing vocals to create a sound bigger than you'd expect from just two people. BRIAN HORGEA

Re: 'I'm proud of who I am' (Metro, June 10) Wow, how awesome it is to be able to read this and have compassion toward her and the torture she has been going through her entire life. Your piece allowed me to see Jen and her life without ever meeting her.

Jen's story allowed me to see her and her mother in that moment when Jen said, "I am a transgender Mom, I've been my whole entire life" and her mom said, "I am so sorry you had to go through this." The compassion that a mother feels for her child is priceless. It allowed me to see my daughter's relationship with me, and it isn't good, especially now realizing how badly I behaved when I found out my daughter, Melody, was gay at 15. I wasn't compassionate toward her. I grieved over the loss of my daughter, she was dead to me because she was no longer my daughter or the ideal of a daughter. I never considered how she must have felt, living a lie of being gay until she came out 12 years ago.

Rangers keep dream alive with Game 4 win

Stanley Cup Final.

The breaks finally fell New York's way as they avoided a sweep and returned the series to L.A.

The Rangers are still alive — and they have Henrik Lundqvist to thank.

Lundqvist was spectacular as he made 40 saves in the Rangers' 2-1 win over the Kings in Game 4 of the Stanley Cup Final Wednesday night at the Garden.

Game 5 is Friday night at the Staples Center in Los Angeles. The Kings still lead the best-of-seven series, 3-1.

The Rangers have come back from a 3-1 series deficit in these playoffs once already, beating the Penguins in the Metropolitan Division finals.

Benoit Pouliot and Martin St. Louis scored for the Rangers. Dustin Brown scored the Kings' lone goal.

With the Rangers holding onto a 2-1 lead to start the third, Lundqvist was spectacular as he made 15 saves, many from around his net.

Pouliot opened the scoring 7:25 into the game with a tip of John Moore's point shot, just as Willie

Martin St. Louis, left, managed to knock in a rebound off a Derek Stepan shot which Jonathan Quick (17 saves) had originally managed to stop. / GETTY IMAGES

Visit Metro.us to see why Alain Vigneault was in a joking mood.

Mitchell's high-sticking penalty expired. The Rangers had the slimmest of leads, and if not for Anton Stralman's stick, would have lost it four minutes later. With the Rangers down a man due to Mats Zuccarello's delay of game penalty, a diving Stralman prevented a goal by sweeping the puck across the goal line with his stick.

The lead grew to 2-0 when St. Louis scored 6:27 into the second period. It was the third game the Rangers had a two-goal lead in the series, but this time they held on.

What went right ...

1 Long live the King
When he met with reporters Wednesday, Henrik Lundqvist said he felt good about the technical aspects of his game. More than 24 hours later, the Rangers' franchise goaltender put on a virtuoso performance. Lundqvist was stellar throughout, especially in a third period in which his team was outshot 15-1.

2 Shifting lines
Alain Vigneault modified the line combinations in Game 4, promoting Carl Hagelin to the top line, having Dominic Moore center Chris Kreider and Martin St. Louis and dropping Brad Richards to the fourth line.

3 All the breaks
The Rangers bemoaned all the bad luck they'd had in the series heading into Game 4, but finally got some in their favor. None was bigger than Derek Stepan somehow keeping a puck out of the net with just 1:11 remaining.

World Cup 2014

Q&A with Chris Albright: Breaking down US' chances

While the World Cup begins Thursday, the U.S. won't get a chance to take the pitch until Monday against Ghana.

We spoke to 2006 Team USA member Chris Albright about the 2014 team's chances in Brazil.

How do you like Team USA's chances in the so-called "Group of Death"?
I think that the game against Ghana is a must-win game for the U.S.

Albright says the U.S. is going to have to be lucky. GETTY IMAGES

Quoted

"Our weakness is an inexperienced back line. They're going to really have to come together as a unit and prove themselves on the biggest stage."

Albright

That will really dictate the success of this team. They won't have to recover in a hard matchup against Portugal or Germany.

What do you view as this team's biggest strengths?
I think the team's strength is its American spirit, as cliché as that sounds. They have an underdog mentality and understand that they're playing against teams that have a much longer and stronger soccer pedigree.

You've had a chance to practice with and play against Clint Dempsey over the years, how will he need to establish himself in these games?

Clint's one of those guys that doesn't necessarily have to play great for us, but you're looking for Clint to make a play. Whether that's a header off of a corner or making a dramatic play in the box, that's something we'll need from him.

Do you think U.S. manager Jurgen Klinsmann saying that it's "unrealistic" for the U.S. to win was justified?

I don't necessarily love that comment, but Jurgen's won World Cups himself, so who am I to question him?

Report: Heat look at Anthony

The NBA season isn't even over yet, but apparently free agent discussion has begun. ESPN reported Wednesday the Heat, who are trailing the Spurs 2-1 in the Finals, are interested in signed Knicks forward Carmelo Anthony this offseason. In order for it to happen, LeBron James, Chris Bosh and Dwyane Wade would all need to opt out of their deals and restructure.
